CA High Speed Rail Update

California voters approved $10 billion in initial funding for high speed rail between Los Angeles and San Francisco in 2008. Construction has begun on the line in the Central Valley. While recent decisions by the California High Speed Rail Authority (CHSRA) will make the Bay Area route the first priority, the Authority is able to direct funding to enabling projects in Southern California. Join us to learn about the routing decisions and timelines.

Special Guest: Michele Boehm, California High Speed Rail Commission

Mobility Hubs

The Department of City Planning recently released its Mobility Hub Planning Guide, part of its Mobility Plan 2035. Mobility Hubs provide a focal point in the transportation network that seamlessly integrates different modes of transportation, multi-modal supportive infrastructure, and place-making strategies to create activity centers that maximize first-mile last mile connectivity. Part of the Plan includes the City's Transportation Demand Management Ordinance. Come learn about the City's plans to manage transportation demand through the creation of mobility hubs and other methods.

Special Guests: David Somers and My La, Department of City Planning
